

Session 4: What are Your Customers Really Buying - and Why?

Key Points...

1. Most people aren't prospects because they're not motivated.
 - It's virtually impossible to sell products to people who have no motivation.
 - You dramatically increase your chances of success if you're selling to motivated people who have a need.
2. People don't buy products or services - they buy results, benefits, and solutions.
 - Most business owners think they're selling a product or service.
 - Most customer think they're buying a solution, a result, or avoidance of pain.
3. Features, Advantages, Benefits, Results, Solutions, and Relief.
 - Most people sell features, not benefits.
 - What is the relief your customer gets with your solution?
 - Losing 20 pounds is a result, and that's great, but the next level is to talk about the ultimate solution, for example, the relief from feeling unattractive.
4. Stop selling logic - instead offer results, solutions, and relief.
 - Ultimately customers don't care about you, your products, your "quality" - or anything else.
 - When they do pay attention to these things, it's only to increase chances of getting results, solutions, and relief.
 - Stop trying to logically convince - instead, focus on results, solutions, and relief.
5. Remember our 3 brains & our irrational decisions.
 - The reason why we focus NOT on logic, but instead on Results, Solutions and Relief, is because people are driven by their motivational systems.
 - And these systems are based on ancient brain systems that drive us to survive, stay safe, find security, find love, express ourselves and actualize.
6. In order to make this mental shift, we must practice it.
 - We are so used to thinking "from our own perspective" that we don't adapt quickly to thinking like a customer.
 - In order to make it natural and automatic to think like a customer, you must imagine that you ARE a customer.
 - Start by "forgetting" about you and our product, then close your eyes and imagine that you're a CUSTOMER.
 - Marketing is entering a conversation that the prospect is already having inside their own mind.
7. How to know you've made the big mental shift:
 - The way to know that you're made the mental shift to thinking like a customer is simple:
 - o When you say or write down customer needs, you speak in first person.
 - o You use phrases that start with, "I want" and not phrases that start with "My Customer Wants."

8. 3 important rules of thumb when targeting your audience:
- Look for customers who are motivated.
 - Look for customers who are looking for you.
 - Look for customers who have few perceived options.
