

Appealing To The Irrational Human

Humans are irrational - and most of our decisions, communication and behavior are the result of irrational forces driving us. To succeed in Marketing, you must abandon “logic” and begin considering and appealing to the irrational motives and drivers hiding in the shadows of human psychology.

Where have you expected people to buy your products - because it was the “logical choice” or the “logical thing to do”?

When have you believed that if offered a “better” product, people would buy it?

How can you begin appealing to the irrational motivations that are REALLY driving most of human thought, communication and behavior?
