

Creating A Category That You Can Own Inside The MIND

The smartest marketers avoid competing directly with bigger, better-financed competitors who are established in a market. Instead, they create a mental category that they can OWN. Use this exercise to create a category that you can own in the mind of your Prospective Customer.

What is the biggest unmet need that your Prospective Customer has - that you could create a unique mental category around?

What could you name this new category, so you're considered the creator of it?

Where could you take an existing category and divide it into 2 or more sub-categories, based on specific needs - then own one of them?
