

Intentionally Creating Customer Friendships

Transforming your mindset from thinking of customers as “sales” or “money” or “numbers” - to thinking of customers as “Business Friends” - is an important step to increasing your conversion and success in business. Use this exercise to begin transforming your mindset, and to begin considering your customers as real friends that you help, watch out for, and contribute to...

Where have you been thinking of customers as “numbers” or impersonal “buyers?”

How can you change your tone with customers to make them feel more like friends from the very beginning?

What can you do to become the only place your customers need to go for important information about their interest, situation or problem?
