

Becoming A Direct Response Marketer

There are two fundamental approaches to Marketing. The first is “branding” - or getting your name out and becoming famous, so that people have you “top of mind.” The second approach to marketing is called “Direct Response” because it is focused on finding individual Prospective Customers and triggering them to RESPOND to your offer. It’s critical that you develop your Direct Response Marketing skills, and develop the ability to sell products 1-to-1 in any situation, niche or environment.

Where have you become convinced that “branding” is synonymous with “Marketing”?

Where do you have bias or prejudice against Salespeople and Marketers, that you must overcome?

What will you have to do internally in order to begin finding Prospects where they are, then asking them to BUY from you?