

Session 16: How to Ask For Action

Key Points...

1. Direct Response Marketing is about ACTION and it's about RESPONSE.
 - In order to trigger action and response, you must remove all blocks and impediments.
 - When creating a Marketing Offer, design it so that it covers all "mental and emotional bases" - and answer all key questions.
2. Remove risk to encourage action & even try to reverse it.
 - Customers feel that they are taking a big risk.
 - Spending money feels very dangerous, and no one wants to look or feel stupid because they made a dumb decision.
 - Remove risk as much as possible, even reverse it if you can.
3. Risk Removal & Reversal:
 - Removal: 100% Money-Back Guarantee.
 - Reversal: 100% Money-Back Guarantee + keep product.
 - Give your Risk Reversal or Guarantee a NAME.
 - Describe your Risk Removal/Reversal in as much detail as possible - to make it perfectly clear, and allow it an opportunity to "land."
4. Summarize the key points of your offer all in one place.
 - After you're created a powerful Marketing message, it's important to summarize the massive value of your offer in one place.
 - This allows your Prospect to see and understand everything they're getting - and to "get it."
 - Organize this information in bullet form.
5. Translate the value of your product and the result it delivers
 - Humans aren't very good at comparing and understanding the "real value" of things.
 - Translate the value of your product and the result it delivers - in terms that your customer can understand.
6. Keep adding value, bonuses and other incentives to the offer
 - The more value you add and create, the more motivation you build in your Prospect.
 - Continue to stack value, bonuses and other incentives to your offer so it becomes so tempting that your Customer can't resist.
7. Give specific directions and ask for your customer to buy now.
 - Never assume that your Customer will know what to do, or how to buy them from you.
 - Give detailed, specific directions - along with a direct request to BUY NOW.
 - "Just click the button below that says 'add to cart,' then complete the one page order form and click on the button that says 'finish my order'."

8. Leave nothing to the imagination - make action steps crystal clear.
 - Look at your purchase process, and try to find ways that a Customer could misunderstand it (and trust me, they will).
 - Eliminate anything that's ambiguous, confusing, unclear - to the point where a child would understand it instantly.
9. The elements of your Marketing work together to create action.
 - Remember: Your Marketing document, website, letter, video, etc. is presented to a Customer as "one thing."
 - It's critical that you design and refine your Marketing communications for continuity.
10. Follow this Marketing Message Formula:
 - Headline that promises a benefit.
 - Set up problem, challenge or opportunity.
 - Story that builds credibility & trust.
 - Introduce solution / result in form of your product
 - Build value, add bonuses, frame price.
 - Remove risk.
 - Summarize offer.
 - Direct to action now.
