

Creating Your Result Based Coaching Package

One of the things that separates successful high paid coaches from everybody else is they don't "sell" coaching, instead they sell results. Remember, a client doesn't buy coaching, they want the results that will come from it. This is the difference between offering somebody who wants to lose weight a "Lose 20 pounds in 90 days coaching package" rather than simply offering some coaching. Use this exercise to help you outline your own result based coaching package.

What's the KEY problem/need your coaching package is going to solve?

What are the 3-10 elements that you'll combine to deliver a working solution to your Customer's problem or need?

Which of these elements or concepts would be the most powerful "opening shot" to set the tone, grab attention, and deliver fast results for your client?

What order makes sense to deliver the rest of the "solution elements" in - so your customer can build on top of the progress they make at each stage?
